University of Arizona

History and Profile

In 1885 — nearly three decades before Arizona became a state — the thirteenth territorial legislature approved $25,000 for building the University of Arizona in Tucson. The first classes convened in 1891, when 32 students and six teachers met in the original building now known as Old Main.

The University had developed in accordance with the Act of Congress of July 2, 1862, known as the Morrill Act. This legislation created the land-grant colleges and enabled the institution to obtain federal funds for its original schools of agriculture and mines.

In its early days, there were more students in the preparatory department than in the University proper, and the number of university graduates was never more than ten a year. Then came a decade of rapid expansion. The territory became a state, high schools multiplied, and the preparatory department was closed. In 1915 the University was reorganized as three colleges — the College of Letters, Arts, and Sciences (later Liberal Arts); the College of Mines and Engineering; and the College of Agriculture. The Arizona Bureau of Mines was established the same year.

In 1922 the College of Education was organized, and in 1925 offerings in law, originally established in 1915, were organized under the College of Law. The School of Business and Public Administration, established within the College of Letters, Arts, and Sciences in 1934, was reorganized as a separate college in 1944. In 1934 the Department of Home Economics was enlarged to a school within the College of Agriculture. In 1934 the College of Fine Arts, including the School of Music, and the Graduate College were established. In 1940 the Arizona Board of Regents reorganized the College of Mines and Engineering into two separate colleges. In 1967 the School of Earth Sciences was organized within the College of Mines, and became the College of Earth Sciences in 1971. In 1947 the School of Pharmacy was organized within the College of Liberal Arts, and was given separate status as the College of Pharmacy in 1949. The mid 50's saw the beginning of extremely rapid growth for the UA, an average of over 1200 additional students a year for almost 20 years.

The Arizona Board of Regents in 1956 authorized the establishment of the School of Nursing as a division of the College of Liberal Arts, and in 1964 the school became the College of Nursing. The Department of Architecture in the college of Fine Arts, authorized in 1958, became the College of Architecture in 1964. The Arizona Board of Regents authorized the College of Medicine in 1961. In 1974 the School of Renewable Natural Resources was approved as a new unit of the College of Agriculture. The School of Health-Related Professions was authorized by the Board of Regents in 1977. In 1982 the College of Liberal Arts and the College of Fine Arts were reorganized into the College of Arts and Sciences which included the Faculty of Fine Arts, the Faculty of Humanities, the Faculty of Science, and the Faculty of Social and Behavioral Sciences. In 1984, the departments that constituted the former College of Earth Sciences were reorganized to become part of the College of Arts and Sciences and College of Engineering. The School of Home Economics was renamed the School of Family and Consumer Resources. In 1985, the College of Mines combined with the College of Engineering to become the College of Engineering and Mines.

In 1993 the colleges of Medicine, Nursing, Pharmacy, and the Department of Medical Technology in the School of Health-Related Professions were grouped as the Arizona Health Sciences Center. Arizona International College was founded in 1994, and moved to the UA campus in 1998. In 1995 the four Arts & Sciences faculties gained college status. In 1996 the School of Health-Related Professions changed its name to School of Health Professions. In 1999 the Sierra Vista Campus was renamed to UA South. Also in 1999, the Honors Program became the Honors College. In 2000 the College of Public Health became the 16th college.

The 40-acre campus of the 1890s has grown to 355 acres and 172 buildings. Its purpose remains, in the language of the original law, “to provide the inhabitants of this state with the means of acquiring a thorough knowledge of the various branches of literature, science, and the arts,” and, insofar as possible, to provide a technical education adapted to the development of the resources peculiar to Arizona. The University is maintained by funds appropriated by the State of Arizona and the United States government, and by fees and collections including private grants from many sources.

University of Arizona, South Campus

History and Profile

For nearly half a century, the University of Arizona has continuously offered credit courses, as well as degree programs, in the Sierra Vista/Fort Huachuca community. Today, UA South is considered one of the three major components of the University of Arizona.

Course and program offerings date to a time before the establishment of Cochise Community College in Douglas in 1964. Lower-division, upper-division, and graduate courses were offered until the formation of the Sierra Vista Campus of Cochise College in the late 1970's. Since that time, the University of Arizona efforts in Sierra Vista have focused on upper-division and graduate courses. Classes were held in donated space in the Army Education Center until 1990, when shifting community demands precipitated a move for most classes to space rented from the Sierra Vista Public Schools. Classes offered in Sierra Vista did not receive state support and were run on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.

The Division of Continuing Education maintained responsibility for classes in Sierra Vista/Fort Huachuca through its Tucson offices until the early 1980's. A local program coordinator was hired and staffed an office at the Fort Huachuca Army Education Center in the mornings, and a store-front office in Sierra Vista in the afternoons. In 1987, Cochise College's student services area in Sierra Vista became the new afternoon home of the program coordinator. Classes were still self-support and taught by part-time faculty approved by the home departments in Tucson, who commuted once a week to teach evening classes.

In fall 1984, Fort Huachuca was electronically connected to the Tucson Campus via a direct microwave transmission path to the Army Education Center. This live connection made it possible to offer a masters degree and other specialized certification programs and classes. This microwave link was built by the military and represents an initial federal commitment of over $250,000. In 1992, responsibility for maintaining the equipment was transferred to the University.

The Sierra Vista Program Center was made an official Off-Campus Center by the Arizona Board of Regents beginning fall 1988. This designation provided state funding to expand services, add a director and staff, and most importantly, hire the first permanent faculty assigned to Sierra Vista.

Offices and 2 classrooms were rented in Sierra Vista for new staff and faculty at 2500 E Fry Boulevard. The microwave receiving site was moved from Fort Huachuca to one of the Sierra Vista classrooms. Additional classrooms were rented from the Sierra Vista Public Schools.

On March 9, 1995, the Arizona Board of Regents voted unanimously to designate the Sierra Vista Campus as an official branch campus of the University of Arizona. This designation allowed the University of Arizona South (UA South) to request separate funding from the Arizona Legislature in 1996 to expand the degree programs and services available to students in southern Arizona and northern Mexico.

Several important developments occurred in 1999. In April, the Arizona Board of Regents approved a new name, the University of Arizona South. This change was in recognition of the expansion of responsibilities throughout southern Arizona, particularly the establishment of an office in the City of Douglas through a partnership with the Mayor and City Council. Also, the Arizona Legislature appropriated and the governor approved $4.25 million to construct the Academic/Technology Building to house classrooms, a Learning Resource Center, and offices. UA South will break ground in the Spring of 2001. The partnership with the Arizona Folklore Preserve will provide research opportunities for faculty and students, and additional classrooms when the new facility opens in February 2001.

The "traditional" student at UA South has been, and continues to be, the "new traditional" student, at least 24 years of age and returning to school with work and family responsibilities. To meet the needs of these students, most UA South classes are offered in late-afternoon or evening sessions, one day per week. Classes are held on UA South campus or next door at Buena High School.

Careful articulation allows students to complete all lower-division degree requirements through the "2 + 2" program with Cochise College, or another in-state community college, and upper-division requirements through UA South.

With the ongoing support of the UA Tucson Campus, the surrounding communities, the Governor, and the Legislature, UA South will continue to respond to the higher education needs of southern Arizona and northern Mexico by providing quality undergraduate and graduate programs in the 21st century.

Academic Programs

CIP (Classification of Instructional Programs) is a six-digit code developed by the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) to classify the primary discipline of an academic program. CIP codes are widely used in national surveys and studies and are the accepted government taxonomy standard for higher education program classification.

Note: Degrees are grouped by college and represent a workload view. In a workload view, graduate interdisciplinary degrees are mapped to the academic department funding the thesis advisor, credit for split-attribution degrees is divided between two colleges, and undergraduate interdisciplinary degrees are split out among the three departments and colleges in each student's program of study. Each major in a double major is counted as half of a degree. Other degrees are attributed to the department and college offering the academic program.

Majors Completed for a Degree, by College

Completed majors are grouped by college and represent a student view of degree program completions. Each major in a double major is counted as a separate completion. This student view attributes majors to the single college a student generally perceives to be offering the program.

In a workload view (such as the "Degrees Conferred by College/Unit and Degree Level" report), interdisciplinary degrees are mapped to the department of the thesis advisor, credit for split-attribution degrees is divided between two colleges, and undergraduate interdisciplinary degrees are split out among the three departments and colleges in each student's program of study. See footnotes to identify degrees that would be reported differently in a workload view.

Notes:

- 1) Detailed SCH figures by department are available on our web site: <http://daps.arizona.edu/>. These figures may not exactly match those in the department tables due to rounding differences.
- 2) These totals will differ from official FTE and SCH reported to ABOR because of differences in methods of calculation for College of Medicine and certain special courses such as correspondence courses, international study, some courses coordinated by Extended University, etc. This table represents the SCH actually produced by faculty in the colleges.

Note: In 1986-87 all increases were effective as of January 1.

^a Includes special adjustments as market/equity, reclassifications, regrades, and promotions.

^c Higher Education Price Index Salary Subindex. Last year projected.

^d All employees received a $1,000 increase, effective 4-1-93. This means no increase from 7-1-92 to 3-31-93, but on 4-1-93, each employee received an increase of $250.

^e The $1,000 per employee was added to the base salary of each employee on 7-1-93. Since this increase was actually given for 1992-93, technically, there was no increase for 1993-94.

^f Faculty received 4.7% on 7-1-94, and 2.0% increase 4-1-95. All other employees received 3.0% on 7-1-94, and 2.0% on 4-1-95.

^g Effective January 1, 1996.

^h Effective April 1, 1997, each employee will receive $500 plus 1%.

ⁱ Effective January 1, 1998; to a maximum of 5%.

^j Effective October 1, 1997; to a maximum of $1,000.

^k Effective January 1, 1999; to a maximum of 5%.

^l Effective October 1, 1998; Classification Salary Adjustments (CSA) for select employee classifications furthest behind the market.

^m Effective April 1, 2000; to a maximum of 4%.

ⁿ Effective April 1, 2000; Internal Market Adjustment for select employee classifications furthest behind the market.

^o Effective April 1, 2001; to a maximum of 4%.
